Who We Are

Citizen Review Panels (CRPs) are groups of citizen volunteers mandated through the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act Amendments of 1996 to:

- Evaluate child welfare agencies; and
- Make recommendations for improvement in child protection services (U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, 1998).

Citizen Review Panels provide opportunities for members of the community to take an active role in protecting children from abuse by partnering with county agencies and the Office of Children, Youth and Families to identify resources and strategies to improve PA's child welfare system.

"There can be no keener revelation of a society's soul than the way in which it treats its children."

-Nelson Mandela

Qualities We Value:

- Concern and compassion for children and families;
- Ability to maintain confidentiality;
- Ability to work as a team;
- Sensitivity to cultural, ethnic, and economic diversity;
- Ability to be independent, nonjudgmental, and to listen to others' opinions; and
- The desire to partner with state and local agencies to identify resources and strategies to improve child welfare.

What We Do:

Each year, CRPs identify a focus area. We meet at least quarterly, and meetings consist of reviewing information and research, examining policies and procedures of state and local child welfare agencies and discussing recommendations for improvement of the system. Recommendations are submitted to the Department of Human Services each year.
